

Where is yellow?

Authors: Lê Thu Phương Quỳnh & Parul Batra

Once, there lived a box of paint tubes in an artist's house.

The yellow tube tells her box-mates,

“I do not want to paint with you guys. I do not want to become warn and old.”

That same day, the artist decided to paint the most beautiful painting ever for all children of the world.

The artist painted the trees with brown. But something was missing. What was it?

The artist painted the leaves with green.
But something was missing.
What was it?

With blue, the artist painted the sky. But still, something was missing. What was it?

She added red and pink for blooming flowers. But still, something seems missing.

She painted the scarlet dragonflies, the lime-green parrots, the snow-white rabbit, and the gray elephant.

But something was STILL missing.

The artist opened the window and looked outside.

Now she knew what was missing. It was the sun!

Yellow?

Yellow?

It takes yellow to paint the sun.
Do you know where yellow is hiding?

Yellow?

Yellow was nowhere to be seen!

But what about the most beautiful painting for all the children in the world?
What could be done?

Yellow thought for a while.
Then she stuck her head out of her hiding place, whispering, “Here I am. You can paint the sun now.
But . . . only take a little of me.”

There! The artist could now finish the most beautiful painting ever for all the children of the world.
Do you like it?
