

What Does the Firefly Have?

Author & Translator: Syeda Farzana Zaman Rumpa

A small firefly lives in the forest. She wanders alone and thinks to herself.

There is beauty everywhere!
Grasshoppers hide in the green grasses there.

The butterfly on the flowers spreads its wings, like in beautiful drawings, over there.

The weaverbird makes a nest with her beak. She sways in the nest
and lives in peace.

The spider builds his webs
out of blue thread.

Bees swarm the flowers and come back to the hives to make honey.

The firefly sees what everyone can do. But what can she do?

The firefly flies to the river
looking for an answer.

The river tells her not to worry.
She will understand at night.

A blue, furry creature with large, wide eyes and a small, toothy mouth is depicted in a dark, watery environment. The creature has two small, curved antennae on its head. A bright yellow light source is visible in the water below the creature, creating a reflection. The background is dark and textured, suggesting a night scene. The overall mood is mysterious and slightly ominous.

Darkness comes and she finally sees that she has a light at night!

The firefly is happy now that she knows she is a bright light. She is a firefly, after all!
